SALT

off the liquor; wipe it dry; or three ounces of pounded it into pieces; pack it close in thick layer of salt between each If the brine does not rise in a strong one, and pour it, upon the salmon, which must be scoured with it.

STEW. Clean and scrape it into slices, and stew it in a stew. A little before serving, spoon of soy, one of SPICED. Mix together, of one-third of salt-and-water to make, one ounce of whole black one ounce of cinnamon. Cut it into slices, and boil it in this; add it close in a pan, and pour it was boiled in, with the to cover it completely; cover it, to exclude the air.

MACKEREL, SPRATS, &c. PICKLE. Cut the fish sexes; do not take off the scales; enough to bear the egg, the fish; it must be boiled as much as to cover it; do not when the fish is boiled, lay it drain off all the salt; when close in the kit, and fill them parts of the liquor the salmon (having first well skimmed it), let them rest for a day; -break the sides of the kit wide, until the kit will receive no and shut them down as close as pos-

SALT, SPICED. Take four drachmas of grated nutmeg, the same of cloves, two of white pepper, two of allspice, two of mace, two of bay-leaf; two of basil, and two of thyme (these three latter articles be dried in an oven). Put these all into a mortar, and pound them to an impalpable powder, and sift it. Take a pound of fine white salt, dry it thoroughly in an oven, or stove; pound it as fine as possible; sift, and mix with it an ounce of the above mentioned spices; amalgamate them thoroughly, keep the spiced salt in a tin box, which will shut perfectly close. Use it in the following proportion: four drachmas to a pound of boned veal.

SALTING MEAT. In the summer season, especially, meat is frequently spoiled by the cock forgetting to take out the kernels; one in the middle of a round of beef; in the fat in the middle of the round, these about the thick end of the flank, &c.; if these are not taken out, all the salt in the world will not keep the meat.

The art of salting meat is to rub in the salt thoroughly and evenly into every part, and to fill all the holes full of salt where the kernels were taken out, and where the butcher's skewers were.

A round of beef of 25 pounds will take a pound and a half of salt to be rubbed in all at first, and requires to be turned and rubbed every day with the brine; it will be ready SALPICION. This is a mixture composed of various articles, such as sweetthreads, fat livers, tongue, ham, champignons, truffles, &c., previously dressed, cut into dice, and cooked in some rich sauce, and seasoned with pepper, salt, nutmeg, cloves, allspice, sweet herbs, and a little butter; take care that all the articles are sufficiently boiled before they are cut up. Many things, such as beef, salmon, fowl, cockerels’ combs, indeed almost any article you please, may be added to the above.

SALT. Is as Plutarch calls it, sauce for sauce.

Common salt is more relishing than basket salt; it should be prepared for the table by drying it in a Dutch oven before the fire; then put it on a clean paper, and roll it with a rolling pin; if you pound it in a mortar till it is quite fine, it will look as well as basket salt.

* * * Select for table-use the lamps of salt.

Obs.—Your salt-box must have a close cover, and be kept in a dry place.

for dressing in four or five days, if you do not wish it very salt.

In winter, it will eat the shorter and tenderer, if kept a few days (according to the temperature of the weather) until its fibre has become short and tender, as these changes do not take place after it has been acted upon by the salt.

In frosty weather, take care the meat is not frozen, and warm the salt in a frying-pans. The extremes of heat and cold are equally unfavorable for the process of salting.

In the former, the meat changes before the salt can affect it: in the latter, it is so hardened, and its juices are so congealed, that the salt cannot penetrate it.

If you wish it red, rub it first with salt-pece, in the proportion of half an ounce, and the like quantity of moist sugar, to a pound of common salt.

You may impregnate meat with a very agreeable vegetable flavor, by pounding some sweet herbs, and an onion with the salt.

You may make it still more relishing by adding a little zest or savoury spice.

SALT PORK, BOILED. See Bacon.

SAPPHIRE, TO DRY, OR PRESERVE. Take it in bunches as it grows; set a large deep stewpan full of water on the fire; as soon as it boils, throw in a little salt, and put in the sapphire; when it looks of a fine green, remove the pan directly from the fire, and take off the sapphire with a fork; lay it on sieves to drain; when cold, lay it on earthen plates, strew sugar well over it, next day turn them on a sieve, and strew it again with sugar, keep turning daily until it is dry; take care the stove is not too hot.

SAPPHIRE, TO PICKLE. Lay some sapphire that is green in a pan, sprinkle it with two or three handfuls of salt, and cover it with spring water, and let it lie by for twenty-four hours; then put it into a large brass stewpan; throw in a handful of salt; cover the pan close, and set it over a very slow fire; let it stand till it is quite green, and crisp; then take it off, for if it becomes soft it is spoiled; put it into a jar, cover it close, and when it is cold, tie it down.

SANDWICHES FOR TRAVELLERS. Spread butter, very thinly, upon the upper part of a stale leaf of bread cut very smooth, and then cut off the slice; now cut off another thin slice, but spread it with butter on the under side, without which precaution the two slices of bread will not fit one another. Next take some cold beef, or ham, and cut it into very minute particles. Sprinkle these thickly over the butter, and, having added a little mustard, put the slices face to face, and press them together. Lastly, cut the whole into four equal portions, each of which is to be wrapped in a separate piece of paper.

SANDWICHES. (1) Cut some bread into thin slices, pare off the crust, and spread a little butter on them; cut them nicely into oblong pieces, put between each some bits of fowl, and then thin bits of ham, both nicely trimmed; add a little mustard and salt. Any cold roasted or potted meat may be used. Serve them for luncheon, garnished with curled parsley.

SANDWICHES. (2) Properly prepared, are an elegant and convenient luncheon or supper, but have got out of fashion, from the bad manner in which they are commonly made: to cut the bread nearly with a sharp knife seems to be considered the only essential, and the lining is composed of any offal odds and ends, that cannot be sent to table in any other form. Whatever is used must be carefully trimmed from every bit of skin, gristle, &c., and nothing introduced but what you are absolutely certain will be acceptable to the mouth.

SANDWICHES, CAKE. Cut a sponge cake, a few days old, as for bread sandwiches, and spread strawberry jam or currant jelly over them.

SAUCE. (1) Few things require more exactitude in making sauces, as most of them should be stirred constantly, the whole attention should be directed to them; the better way therefore, is to prepare the sauces before cooking those articles which demand equal care, they may be kept hot in the bain-marie.

Butter, and those sauces containing eggs, ought never to boil. The thickest stewpan should be used for making sauces, and wooden spoons used for stirring them.

SAUCE. (2) Mix together a pint of vinegar, two shallots or heads of garlic, a tea-spoonful of cayenne, three large tablespoonfuls of Indian soy or mushroom ketchup, and two of walnut pickle. Let it stand a week, shaking it daily; strain, and bottle it for use.

FOR ANY SORT OF MEAT.

Boil and strain three tablespoonfuls of gravy, two of vinegar, a blade of mace, a little pepper, salt, and a large sliced onion.

ANCHOVY. Pound three anchovies in a morter with a little bit of butter; rub it through a double hair sieve with the back of a wooden spoon, and stir it into almost half a pint of melted butter; or stir in a table-spoonful of essence of anchovy. To the above, many cooks add lemon-juice and cayenne.

APPLE. (1) Pare, core, and slice some apples; boil them in water, with a bit of lemon-peel; when tender, mash them; add to them a bit of butter the size of a walnut, and some brown sugar. Heat, and serve in a sauce-tureen.

APPLE. (2) Pare and core three good-sized baking apples; put them into a well-lined pint saucepan, with two tablespoonfuls of cold water; cover the saucepan close, and set it on a trivet over a slow fire a couple of hours before dinner, (some apples will take a long time stewing, others will be ready in a quarter of an hour); when the apples are done and soft, pour off the water, let them stand a few minutes to get dry; then beat them up with a fork, with a bit of butter about as big as a nutmeg, and a tea-spoonful of powdered sugar.

N. B.—Some add lemon-juice, grated, or minced fine, or boil a bit with the apples.

ATTELETS. Take of finely-minced parsley, mushrooms, and shallots, a table-spoonful each; fry them with a little butter, and then dredge in a little flour; moisten the mixture with some good stock, season it with pepper and salt, and boil it till it begins to thicken; then take off the fire, and add the well-beaten yolks of two or three eggs. Stir it well all the time it is making.

BEEF-GRavy, or Brown Sauce for Ragout, Game, Poultry, Fish, &c. If you want gravy immediately, see Potato Soup, or Glaze. If you have time enough, furnish a thick and well-tinted stewpan with a thin slice of salt pork, an ounce of butter, and a middling-sized onion; on this lay a pound of nice, juicy gravy beef, (as the object in making gravy is to extract the nutritious succulence of the meat, it must be beaten to comminute the containing vessels, and scorched to augment the surfaces to the action of the water); cover the stewpan, and set it on a slow fire; when the meat begins to brown, turn it about, and let it get slightly browned (but take care it is not at all burned): then pour in a pint and a half of boiling water, set the pan on the fire; when it boils, carefully catch the scum, and then put in a crust of bread toasted brown (don't burn it) a spring of winter savory, or lemon thyme and parsley—a roll of thin cut lemon-peel, a thin slice of fresh black pepper. Cover the stewpan close, and let it stew very gently for about two hours. Now if you wish to thicken it, set a cloth or a stewpan over a slow fire, with about an ounce of butter in it; when it is melted, add a little of the gravy—stir it well together, and add the remainder by degrees; set it over the fire, be careful it doesn't burn, and before the skin is off the fat, &c. as it rises, about as thick as cream, squeeze it through a tamis or fine sieve—and you will have a fine rich Brown Sauce, at a very moderate expense, and without much trouble.

FOR BOILED BEEF. Mix a large onion, parboil it, and drain off the water; put the onion into a saucepan, with a table-spoonful of finely-chopped some good gravy, and one ounce of butter, and let it be dredged with a little flour, near ten minutes, and add a saucen to an ounce of butter, and add a spoonful of capers, which must be thoroughly cooked before the sauce is served.

BROWN. Take a pound or two of steaks, two or three pounds of beef, some pickings of fowl, carrots, and onions, put these into a saucepan with a glass of water, and boil; let it simmer gently, moisten it with stock (or water), bunches of parsley and green onions, two leeks, two cloves, and some chafing-dish salt well, and set it on the fire for three hours; then strain; disjoint a little round your liquor, and boil an hour over a good fire, take off all the fat, and run it through a bolting.

BONNE BOUCHE, FOR GOOSE, DUCK, OR ROAST POLO.

Mix a tea-spoonful of made mustard, a salt-spoonful of salt, and a few grains of cayenne; large wine-glassful of claret or Port, pour it into the goose by a slit in the side just before serving up; or, as the company may not like it, stir it into a quarter of a pint of thick melted butter, or shaded gravy, and send it up in a boat. A good relish for roast pork or goose, is to add two ounces of leaves of green sage, an ounce of fresh lemon-pearl pared thin, some salt, minced esculent, and half a drachm of cayenne pepper, ditto of citric acid, for a forcément in a pint of claret;
